While taking pictures at Manila Bay, I gained a tag-along boy. Melchor, 11, is one of 7 in his family. He does not go to school because of poverty. He followed me and asked lots of questions. One resounding was, "Are you hungry? Maybe you could buy something and share some with me?" After our hour-long walk along the Manila Bay Boardwalk, I stopped and bought Melchor and his family~ chicken meals, bananas, crackers, mentos, and orange soda. As we departed, I said I have one more thing . . . I got one of Threads of Hope's 'Gospel Bracelets' out and shared the significance of the colors. He liked it a lot. We said good bye. Please pray for Melchor and his family. You can see his picture here in the facebook album. He has the soccer ball that washed up on the beach: <https://www.facebook.com/media/set/?set=a.3906806342072.2156542.1036689609&type=3>

As I was leaving, the parking attendant came over to my car and asked if HE could have a bracelet . . . I got to share the Good News of Jesus with Him Too! - The Way, the Life, the Truth!
